

Katerina Ponomarenko

2015

Kaliningrad, Russia

Atlantic branch of P.P. Shirshov Institute of Oceanology of the RAS

POMOR is an international interdisciplinary scientific program that gives you a chance to choose among a ton of opportunities. It is the best way to start your scientific journey. My most vivid impression was being aboard an international research cruise to the Arctic, because it was a great chance to take part in a real scientific working process and of course because the scenery is amazing. I think the most important thing was the experience of international communication, especially in science.

POMOR gives you a good skill of scientific writing that is why now I feel quite confident writing scientific projects or any kind of working correspondence.

POMOR gives you an unique opportunity to get in touch with a lot of best scientists from different scientific fields and countries. Connections formed during training are priceless.

In my current scientific work, I am happy to have the possibility to turn for advice or help or even make a working proposition to great minds of our time.

If I could turn back time, I would definitely apply again!

Saint Petersburg, 2015 / Kaliningrad, 2020